Archive Name: Hollenweger Centre for Interdisciplinary Study of Pentecostalism and Charismatic Movements

Location: Vrije Universiteit (Free University), De Boelelaan 1105 1081 HV Amsterdam

URL: <https://vu.nl/en/about-vu/more-about/hollenweger-centre>

Archivist/Owner: Miranda Klaver, director of the Hollenweger Center.

Description: The Pentecostalism book and periodical collections held by the Free University Library include some 3292 book titles and 74 titles of periodicals/serial works from the Hollenweger and Azusa collections. The collections have been catalogued and are accessible through the Vrije Universiteit catalog, the National Dutch catalog, and Worldcat. Traditionally, however, researchers and other users have had to visit the facility or request copies in order to make use of the materials. The aim of digitizing the material is to expand access to these important (historical) holdings. Digitization also enhances preservation of the material by reducing wear and tear on the originals for reference and reproduction and at the same time it will improve service by allowing more users to have access to the same material at the same time. The digitization program is focused primarily on relatively old and rare materials that are not already digitized or easily available elsewhere.

Location: Dallas, Texas

URL: <https://www.caachr.org>

Archivist/Owner: Glenda Williams Goodson, Founder and Executive Director, centerforaachurchhistory@caachr.org

Description: The Center for African American Church History and Research, Inc. (CAACHR), Church of God in Christ (COGIC) collection span eight decades and is a rich and diverse archival resource documenting the organization's history. After holiness leader Charles Harrison Mason received the Pentecostal experience of Spirit baptism with the sign of speaking in tongues at the Azusa Street Revival the reorganized COGIC became one of the most influential Christian organizations in America impacting all races, nationalities and by 2010 a reported 60 countries. The COGIC collection is a result of twenty-five years of preservation of souvenir books, funeral programs, photos, artifacts, Whole Truth newspapers, newspaper clippings from private holdings as well as history interviews with COGIC pioneers (VHS, CD and DVD format). It describes the church's impact on education, international missions primarily in Liberia and Haiti but also Ghana. Women, Aô's Ministry pictorial reviews, scenes from Women's Conventions, retirement homes built or purchased by women, photo stamps, fundraising items (place mats, memorial plates) and booklets written by female leaders are a large part of the collection. Souvenir books dating to the 1940s trace church development and late 20th century political buttons, campaign brochures and 3D objects are a part of the general church holdings. Personal letters and documents shed light on some struggles of the church's transitory period between the death of its founder and reorganization. Description: The IPHC Archives and Research Center occupies approximately 3,560 square feet, including a display room, reading room, and three climate-controlled vaults. Through a partnership with the Consortium of Pentecostal Archives, more than 6,500 items have been digitized, including The Advocate (1917–1996), church manuals and minutes (1911–2017), The Experience, Holiness Advocate, Fire-Baptized Holiness publications, Pentecostal Truths, and the recently added Altamont Witness newsletters (1911–1918). The archives preserve artifacts, records, and photographs from founders, bishops, missionaries, ministers, laypeople, regional conferences, educational institutions, and denominational administration. Holdings also include books, dissertations, course syllabi, Sunday School materials, Bibles, audiovisual recordings, microfilm, and conference yearbooks. A searchable online catalog, launched in 2023, now includes more than 3,000 books, sermons, videos, and photographs, with new records added regularly, alongside an online museum. The center also maintains an extensive e-archives database of more than 40,000 folders and 400,000 files documenting every area of IPHC governance, ministries, missions, administration, finance, legal affairs, and publications. Updated annually, this resource supports historical preservation and institutional research. Overall, the collection includes more than 4,000 books and binders, over 1,300 archival boxes, 400 microfilm reels, cabinet files, posters, and other unique artifacts.
